

FAMILY FOCUS

The KIT staff, residents, and families work as partners in treatment. We have demonstrated the ability to engage, cultivate, and maintain a youth's connections to family and natural supports, as we promote family contact, involvement, and visitation. We offer weekly family therapy to facilitate reunification and to improve relationships with family members. KIT is committed to making family treatment accessible for every family, and KIT therapists often arrange evening or weekend sessions for parents with daytime obligations. In addition to weekly contact with the child's therapist, parents are encouraged to attend and participate in the monthly treatment team meeting.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Opened in May of 2005, the Kids in Transition (KIT) Program provides specialty residential treatment in a highly structured environment to children with emotionally and behaviorally complex challenges. KIT is a part of the CFG Health Network.

KIT strives to prepare boys for a successful transition back into their families and home community or other permanent setting by providing consistent care and a safe place for a healing experience. At the heart of the KIT Program treatment philosophy is our firm belief that the foundation upon which all positive growth and change occurs is a sense of internal security which is strengthened by healthy attachments and relationships. KIT uses a multidisciplinary approach to address the complex needs of each child, building upon his strengths towards success.

Our treatment team is committed to providing unparalleled clinical services. The team members include a Board Certified Child, Adolescent and Adult Psychiatrist, licensed clinical social workers, a registered nurse, a school principal, certified special education teachers, behavior care specialists, parents, guardians, community providers, and other clinical support staff.
